Thanks. Please could you include a short note for the "about authors" section.

Anthony.

Dear Anthony,

I just finished checking the page proofs of my article "The Libertarian Imperative".

First of all I would like to thank you very much for editing my paper.

There are 4 places in the paper where some corrections could be made, but these are of rather cosmetic character, so that please feel free in deciding whether to make them or not. I will point to these possible corrections by sending you small graphic files with the text of the paper. To avoid confusion, I will send them in separate messages.

Yours sincerely,
Undo

The first correction to the paper "The Libertarian Imperative": page 48, bottom.

A new system of postal codes has been introduced in Estonia recently (the old system was a legacy of Soviet empire). For our observatory, the old code EE2444 has been replaced by 61602. However, I think that for a quite long time the post clerks will remember better the old system rather than the new one. So it is not so important to make this replacement.

The second/third correction to the paper "The Libertarian Imperative": page 49 bottom / page 50 top.

I had copied a quotation taken from Chalmers' book from an article of another author. Now I have this book myself and I found out that the quotation has two errors (insignificant, though). Also, it would be better not to begin a new line after this quotation (but this would alter the page layout up to the page 55 inc). Anyway, this correction could also be omitted.

The 4-th correction to the paper "The Libertarian Imperative": page 52.

When writing the paper I somehow forgot that British spelling is `neurone' rather than `neuron'. On page 52 `neurons' could be replaced by `neurones' in 3 places.

The 5-th correction to the paper "The Libertarian Imperative": page 61.

The word `aforementioned' should be deleted, as the passage to which it refers has been removed from the final version of the paper.

I have entered all the corrections.

Thanks,

Anthony.

There is no need. Your signed copyright transfer came this morning.

Thanks,

Anthony.
