Dear Keith:

I posted today a copy of the last version of my paper on Free Will for Prof. Libet, and four copies (one regularly spaced and three double-spaced) for you. In revising the article I responded/reacted to virtually every point in the report (which I add to this message) on my paper by the anonymous referee.

Dear Keith:

I considered your proposal to write a review of Lowe's book "Subjects of Experience" for JCS, and I think I would like to try to do it. The reasonable length of the review would probably be 1.5 JCS pages -- the average length of JCS book reviews. I have a copy of Lowe's book.

Have you received the final version of my article on Free Will?

That sounds about right. Can you email it to Anthony when it's ready.

Yes thanks very much. I'm saving reading it until we get to the proof stage (assuming it passes the final hurdles).

best wishes

Libet has just given the go-ahead for your revised paper (in fact he was quite enthusiastic, which is unusual, as he can't stand philosophers!)

So now we'll send it to the ed-in-chief, Joe Goguen -- should be OK, but he's a little bit unpredictable. The issue as a whole is shaping up very nicely and I'm looking forward to publishing it greatly.

All the best.

Dear Undo,

At long last I am getting ready to typeset the papers for the "Volition" issue of JCS to be published next year.

I have a paper copy of your final version, but it would save me a great deal of time if you could send me an electronic version, either by email or as a disk through the post.

Thanking you in advance,

Anthony Freeman.
